SHOWED HER LEG.

There are very few actors or actresses on the stage today who remember Belle Boyd,-the "Rebel Spy", who died the other day,-as an actress. It is claimed by those who ought to know that the published story that she appeared in the production of "The Professor" at the Madison Square is not correct. However, whether it is or not, here is a fairly interesting story about Belle

Boyd's "pal."

Down at Sea Girt, N. J., the light house is in charge of Major Wolf, a war and lighthouse veteran, who was not only in command of Fort Delaware during the Civil War, but for 30 years afterward tended the big lighthouse at Atlantic City. A great many of the distinguished southern soldiers were prisoners at Fort Delawareduring the Major's regime.

"I never ran across Belle Boyd," said the Major in answer to a question, "but I had a queer experience with one of her women friends—a tall gaunt-looking girl, who was limping badly when they arrested her on one of the boats one night. She sent for me and I went to her cabin.

"'Major,' she said, 'I know all about you, and I am going to give you my word as a gentlewoman that what I say is true. I am Belle Boyd's 'pai.' 1 have been a spy, and we have done a lot of work for the cause together. But at present I'm trying to make my way to New York. I was shot in the calf of the right leg the other night and I want to get to New York for treatment. What I want you to do is this. I want you to hide my trunk. If the officers ever search it I'm done for. There's a cavalry uniform in it which I always wear when in the field. If they find it they'll throw me in prison and my leg will have to come off."
"Well, I believed the woman, for she

"About four years ago," continued the Major, "I was on the board walk at Atlantic City, and stopped in front of a bootn where some celebrated pictures were on exhibition. Suddenly a grayhaired woman, who was selling tickets stepped up to me and said: 'I beg you pardon, but arn't you Major Wolf —the Major Wolf who was in command of Foat Delaware during the wai?"

"When I said 'Yes' she asked me to step inside for a minute. She led me into a room and closed the door. Being a family man and only 74, I began to feel slightly embarrassed," added the major. "But judge of my feelings when she lifted her kirts as high as her knee and began to let down her "As she rolled her stocking down she

"I looked," continued the major, im

ALLEGED ALBATROSS FACTS .- New nd attractive features continue to be added to the free museum at the City Hall. Col. Hawkins is now having mounted a young albatross or molly hawk, which was presented by Capt.

and legs are not strong enough to sup-port them, hence they either stay in air or alight in water. An albatress sleeps on the wing, and rarely ever flaps its wings. When it wishes to rise from the water, if there is a breeze it faces the wind, raises it wings and, making a circular motion to the right, gets wind enough under its wings to get under headway. In calm weather it gets on its wings by running on the surface of the water until it gets sufficient wind underneath it to lift it into the sir. This peculiar bird, Captain Paulson This peculiar bird, Captain Paulson says, is perfectly at home in a storm; the rougher the gale the more the albatross appears to enjoy itself. It seldom lights on the water when a storm rages, preferring the rough winds that toss it about and carry it along. This is the second albatross that Colonel Hawkins is having mounted for the museum.—[Morning Oregonian.

A LAUGHABLE AFFAIR.-A laughable affair occure in the village of Knoxville, affair occured in the viriage of Khoxvine, Pa., last Thursday evening. Archdeacon Radeliff, of the Episcopal diocese, was scheduled to hold special services in the church that evening, and a goodly number of men, women and children assembled early. The sexton of the church was not on duty and the task of ringing the bell was given to a 12 year-old son of Rector Robinson. The lad went to work with a zeal and soon the ponderous bell was ringing On a previous voyage he caught one of treme idous size. He declared that it measured 17 feet from tip to tip when stretched upon the deck.
